

March 2020 | Vol. X Issue III

Upcoming Events

We have some exciting events coming up this year, stay tuned!

Emergency Preparedness

- Please be sure to let us know if you need to reschedule any scheduled appointments.
- If you are a Managed Service customer and your business hours are changing please let us know.
- Prepare your employees with the ability to work remotely. Reach out to us, we are here to help!

Contact Us

Find us | We're Social!

"I'm a greater believer in luck, and I find the harder I work the more I have of it."

-Thomas Jefferson

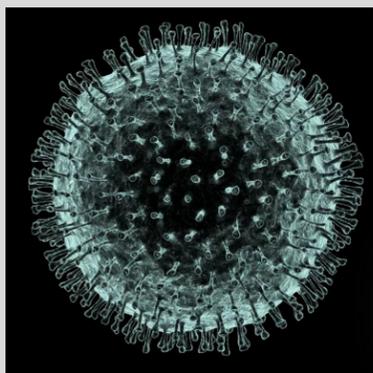

Are you prepared for your employees to work remotely?

The Covid-19 coronavirus is causing companies to reexamine the way their employees work. Working remotely is not just about a healthy, happier workforce, but today it's also about company survival. A single employee carrying the virus could force a company-wide quarantine for weeks. How many companies could adapt and survive that type of scenario? Could yours?

According to Saikat Chatterjee, Senior Director, Advisory at Gartner, "We're being forced into the world's largest work-from-home experiment and, so far, it hasn't been easy for a lot of organizations to implement." Some of the root challenges businesses are facing come from a lack of technology infrastructure and/or collaboration systems that make a remote workforce a possibility. The unfamiliarity with this new way of working is also a challenge for many to overcome.

Read More

In The News

The coronavirus impact: Here's how COVID-19 has affected the tech industry

The novel coronavirus continues to wreak havoc in the global technology industry. Many companies have shut factories and banned business-related travel and major industry events like Facebook's F8, the Geneva Motor Show, Google I/O and Mobile World Congress continue to be called off because of the outbreak.

READ MORE

Twitter is forcing its 4,900 employees to work from home

Twitter is requiring its 4,900 employees to work from home according to a blog post, as the COVID-19 coronavirus continues to spread across the globe.

The move is now mandatory, as the company said it has a "responsibility to support our communities, and those who are vulnerable."

READ MORE